What are the requirements to graduate? 1 hypothesis? 2 A. Similar to a master's. You would have to 2 A. I collected a lot of information, so it's 3 take a set amount of hours and do this 3 multi layered. One theory -- one 4 amount of research. 4 information that we collected, of course, 5 Q. Okay. So there's two components, course 5 was prevalence information. That was more 6 work and then a research component? 6 towards my master's. You could detect how 7 A. Yes. 7 many. That's not too hard of a 8 Q. Okay. Tell me about the course work 8 hypothesis. I think there's -- the 9 requirement. How long is that? What do 9 population, the prevalence of heart worm 10 you do? 10 disease in cats is five percent or ten 11 A. I think that it is two years of course 11 percent. If I actually go do this 12 work, or it can be spread out on average to 12 research, I found that it was at two 13 about two years of course work. It's upper 13 percent by necropsy, 15 percent by 14 level course work. Freshmen and sophomores 14 serology. 15 take 100, 200, juniors take 300, seniors 15 As I went toward my Ph.D, we were going 16 take 400 level courses, graduate students 16 to investigate the histopathology behind 17 would take five or 600 level. The committee is a group of people who are supposed to help the graduate student meet the requirements, choose courses that are beneficial to their area of study and research, and inevitably at the end listen to their thesis and decide on whether they have done enough work or not. The committee is also involved in checking the progress of the student, his academic progress and other things, and if they're not — if the student is not meeting the requirements or if they think that his progress is slowing down, they're to warn him or her of the work, the progress is not going as they see planned. That would be a for sure way one that you wouldn't finish the program. Not being able to handle the course work would be another one. Q. What do you mean by that? A. As in all degrees and programs, you're required to take courses. You're required to keep your GPA above a certain level. If you fail every course, then they're not going to keep moving you through the program and graduate you. Q. Was being in the Ph.D. program substantially harder than the DVM or MS or undergrad? A. Not enough to elaborate on that I can even remember. Q. During the summer and fall of 2003, who else worked with you in the lab? A. There was another graduate student there named Sarah. Q. Do you know her last name? A. No. Jamie Butler was there, Tracey Land was there. There were two guys and two girls that I could pick out their face that worked there. Q. Okay. And Jamie Butler was lab supervisor? A. I'm guessing that's what her title is. Q.
